“In my first year at delaware, I’ve been working on the Medusa migration project at De Watergroep. From a back-end perspective, our goal is to migrate and validate the full data model from SQL Server DBMS to the cloud-based Databricks data platform. My role on the project has been to extract the data from the source system and transform it into consistent input for the target system. Then I validate the data to ensure it has been transferred correctly and that all integrity rules have been maintained. This way, data is made available to front-end systems and can be used for the requested processes. — Irene Paolini

Like Irene, you’ll be involved in the entire consulting cycle from A to Z (i.e. from analysis to implementation and training). Your goal is to create end-to-end, integrated data solutions, which could include:

Data capturing you extract and bring together as much structured, semi-structured, and unstructured data as possible, wherever it may reside (i.e. ETL process)

Data and information management: you not only integrate and enrich data, you also manage the data architecture, modeling, governance, quality, and security

Analytics and data science : You help your customers generate the right type of insights: from reporting on past events or handling large volumes of data to predicting and even prescribing future events

Visualization : you make sure the data is properly visualized with regard to both content and design. You set up interactive reports and dashboards for our customers
