Skills & Qualifications

The tasks of a data scientist manager are diverse, and we are not looking for the unicorn data scientist, but a mindset focused on learning on the job is vital!

Elements we hope to see in our data scientist managers:

Concrete experience delivering concrete AI products.

A master degree with strong elements of modern data science techniques: Machine Learning algorithms, coding, statistics,...

Other types of education are also valued.

A sound knowledge of algorithms, and the ability to critically apply this knowledge to practical problems.

Knowledge of common data science software. We have a Python-first setup, but will if needed tackle problems using R, SAS, SQL, Spark, and work with tools such as Jupyter Notebooks, IDE's, Git, Microsoft Azure,

Obviously, additional bonus points for PhD's, and more specific knowledge like e.g. Keras, D3.js

The desire to learn and grow

A positive, collaborative, and flexible mindset

Knowledge of dutch is a big plus

We offer

In a world where stakeholders are consistently expected to provide more diverse digital experiences, data scientists are continuously challenged – to work is to grow. The KPMG Lighthouse is currently looking for talents in the field of data science, people who are able to exploit data to create smart digital solutions, but who are also able to inspire about the art of the possible.

What is the job about?

Contributing to the growth of Advanced Analytics and Machine Learning as a topic and as a competence at KPMG

Contributing to the growth of our project portfolio

Mentoring colleagues

Stepping into conversations with clients, and translating their business needs into Artificial Intelligence solutions

Gathering and organizing data

Deciding on an analytical approach, and executing the analysis with a good eye for detail, all the while efficiently working towards the best possible solution

Communicating with clients: absorbing their thoughts, convincing them of the strengths of your models

Bringing your model into production – and communicating with specialist IT profiles

Creating and maintaining good relationships with stakeholders – clients, vendors, KPMG colleagues,...
