In today's rapidly-changing energy world, new challenges often require new solutions. The same goes for utility industry solutions which are heavily impacted by the increasing decentralization of energy production – through e.g. solar panels and wind turbines – and the digitization of meters for end-users.

For key customers in the industry, delaware is currently building state-of-the-art EAM for Utilities, using the latest SAP S/4HANA functionalities. We've clustered our asset management projects into investment works, maintenance and exploitation, network connections and asset register. Our long-term implementation programs include very large and innovative utility projects where integration with Geographical solutions is also key. You wouldn't want to miss out on that, would you?

What will you be doing as an SAP EAM consultant for Utilities?

As an SAP EAM consultant, you'll be involved in the entire implementation project. This means you'll guide the customer from analysis, blueprinting and customization, up until the actual go-live of their brand new system.

We offer around 16 different products, and each product is as unique as the team tasked to build and implement it. Depending on the SAP EAM module in which you've gained experience, you'll either simplify the customer's asset lifecycle with Compatible Units (CU) and Geographical Enablement Framework (GEF) or manage resources using Multi-Resource Scheduling (MRS).

First, you'll provide us with integrated asset management solution designs, making sure to include workload estimations as you go.

Armed with a complete functional analysis, you'll configure the solution, and if extra programming is necessary, you'll write the specifications.

You'll make sure to synchronize requirements with the application and data architecture including interfaces and integrations.

Needless to say, you'll follow the development carefully and test everything thoroughly before it is released to users.

You'll take younger, less experienced colleagues under your wing and show them the ropes.

Next to your consultancy assignments, you'll also fulfil a minor commercial role, while you assist your colleagues in creating presales proposals.

You'll spend much of your time working on site at the customer's offices, where you'll always be surrounded by your delaware colleagues. You can also meet your other colleagues in one of the delaware offices in Gent, Antwerpen, Wavre, Liège, Kortrijk or Lummen,
