What will you be doing as a SAP GTS consultant?

Global trade management systems helps companies to stay on top of international trade regulations – but where does that put you? Let's have a look:

As an SAP GTS consultant, you do your utmost to bring every GTS implementation project to a successful conclusion. You guide the customer through the entire process, from A to Z:

First, it's time to take a deep dive into the customer's trade processes: you'll analyze the inbound and outbound logistics flows. In close collaboration with the customer you'll learn all about the specific requirements inherent to their business environment or industry. After analyzing the processes, you'll translate them into SAP GTS and set up the system and organize workshops to teach end users how to use their brand new solution. If extra programming is necessary, you'll write the specifications. Needless to say, you follow the development carefully and test everything thoroughly before it is released to users. This also entails supervising the user testing and making adjustments as needed. You'll make sure your customers are well prepared for a successful go-live: a tense phase in which you'll play an important role.

After implementation, you'll provide support and guidance and identify possible process improvements.

At the same time, you'll support the customer to ensure the constantly changing international regulations are addressed – that's what compliance management is all about.

You'll be automating the global trade transactions of multiple international companies – delaware is proud to have built a diverse client portfolio across various industries.

This means that there are opportunities to work on international projects as well. By travelling abroad you'll build up that international experience at the customer's site.

Today, we have offices in Gent, Antwerpen, Wavre, Kortrijk and Lummen and you will often be working onsite at our customers, wherever they are in Belgium. So it does not really matter whether you are living in Limburg, Brussel, Gent, Brugge, Antwerpen ... It is highly likely we are implementing an SAP GTS solution in your area right now!
