Company: The Glue

Location: Belgium

Category: computer-and-mathematical

Imagine yourself in a role where you'll be using your architectural skills to evaluate requirements and define solutions that are built in-house at The Glue. You will guide the development teams and be involved until a successful "go-live".

This is a great opportunity to make an impact at a growing company. The Glue is part of Projective Group, offering international opportunities in data architecture.

Responsibilities for this role include:

You are the technical link between the client's project team and the developers of The Glue. In other words, you'll transform the (non-functional) client wishes into documented designs and solutions.

You define the optimal technical solution for our client's wishes, taking into account the existing capabilities of our reference architecture

You coach the development team and perform reviews of their deliverables

You work together with our functional and technical analysts to deliver an optimal application design, which meets both functional and non-functional requirements (security, high availability, performance…).

What are we looking for?

You are versatile to work on technical topics at different stages of a project life-cycle (i.e.

sales pre-studies, design and architecture, development, testing, roll-out…)

You are highly analytical and able to understand the client's non-functional requirements

You are passionate about following any new technological trends

You have good knowledge of cloud-based software architecture

You have a proactive approach and are able to work autonomously

You are agile minded

You are an enthusiast and dynamic team player

You are fully capable of working in English

You have an excellent knowledge of French or Dutch with, at least, a basic understanding of the other national language

A basic understanding of Azure, Docker, Kubernetes, Spring Boot or React is certainly a plus

Ok, I'm interested; what can I expect?

You will work in a very dynamic startup environment, with a flat structure and no office politics

You get the chance to join a growing company, surrounded by supportive and ambitious colleagues

A fully renovated office in Diegem, designed according to the highest office standards (read: there's a very nice bar)

Amazing benefits, incl. a company car and flexible homeworking options
